MANHATTAN FILM FESTIVAL
PREMIERE OF AWARD-WINNING “UNBURDEN”
Mom’s First Short on the Power of Forgiveness in Parenting

Seven years ago, Tamara Rabil gave up her bustling business to devote all her energy to parenting. After all three kids could buckle themselves in the car seat, Rabil could finally breathe, and had the opportunity to reflect deeply on the imperfect parenting journey. Now her first short film UNBURDEN, recent Grand Jury Selection winner at Gasparilla and Lifetree, will screen at the Manhattan Film Festival. The film deals with the tragedy and redemption of a mother’s mistake.

Joy (Angela Pierce, Law and Order, Medium, You Don’t Know Jack) is haunted by the memory of a terrible accident she caused when her daughter Callie (Quinn McColgan, Mildred Pierce, Unforgettable and the upcoming Non-Stop) was an infant. Putting her to bed one night, Joy invents a story about a robin family whose chick falls from the nest. Callie’s persistent questions force Joy to relive the shock waves this incident caused her and her husband Frank (Paul Hickert, Tower Heist, One Life to Live).

The Manhattan Film Festival, in its 7th year, is dedicated to expanding the viewership of fresh, up-and-coming filmmakers, but also providing a continued outlet for well-established talent. Phil Nelson, the Festival Director, makes an effort to personally view each and every film submitted. The team behind UNBURDEN is honored to be a part of the selection.

The Manhattan fest is an ideal venue for us as writer/executive producer Tamara Rabil is indeed fresh and up-and-coming, albeit with a veteran team at the Jacob Burns Film Center behind her. A successful entrepreneur in the fashion world, Rabil realized when her second child was born that the fashion world wasn’t flexible enough to accommodate the needs of a growing family. After three years of full devotion to motherhood, she was ready to re-enter work life. That’s when a brochure from the Jacob Burns Media Arts Lab, dedicated to educating children and adults in film, arrived in the mail.

Rabil found her voice as a storyteller in “Getting the Story: Introduction to Documentary Storytelling,” a class taught by Academy-Award-nominated Bobby Houston. Rabil says,

“On the first night of class, Bobby asked us to bullet-point three things we were most afraid of in life. I could only come up with one – I’m most afraid of being an unfit mother.” Her admission led to deep soul searching, and recounting an accident that happened with her six-week-old daughter. That accident and its aftermath became the basis for a story, which in turn became the basis for the UNBURDEN screenplay co-written by Billy Shebar, writer of award-winning films including Dark Matter and 50 Ways to a Better Memory.

Rabil hopes that by sharing her story, she can alleviate the suffering of other parents in similar situations. “I realized as I journeyed through the process of telling my story,” she says, “that many families suffer from similar experiences. Parenting is imperfect. These tragic experiences unite us with strength and confidence to know we are not alone.”

Thanks to her studies at the center, Rabil was able to work with a talented, experienced crew, most notably Andrew L. Young, Susan Todd, and Todd Sandler. Young served as director. An acclaimed cinematographer, his work has won numerous awards, including five awards at the Sundance Film Festival. Young’s partner Susan Todd produced the film. UNBURDEN was edited by Todd Sandler. He edited the dramatic-thriller, Leave, starring Rick Gomez, Frank John Hughes, Ron Livingston and Bryan Cranston; and worked alongside Jonathan Demme on his latest documentary, I’m Carolyn Parker, which premiered at the 2011 Venice Film Festival.

Rabil has been working on the development of a website to serve as a hub and resource for parenting films, narrative and documentary, long and short form. She plans to solicit stories and films from around the world, serving both as executive producer and distributor.

Rabil graduated from Virginia Commonwealth University (VCU) with a BFA degree in Fashion Merchandising. She spent most of her 20s working in New York City fashion for top designers like Ralph Lauren, Donna Karan, and Guess Jeans. In her late 20s she obtained an MA from Columbia University Teachers College in Adult Education and taught fashion at VCU. Rabil then opened her own label, TEGNA, a line of women’s golf apparel that was sold in private golf courses and big box retailers all over the United States and England. Rabil, her husband and their three children make their home in Armonk, NY.
